■ Readers still ask about pay television and whether it has a chance of succeeding.

It doesn't. Pay television is dead.

■ We say this rather sadly, not because we hold any brief for pay-TV, but because our present free television could use some stiff competition to force it out of the numbers business and into more variety and more quality in regular programming.

The reasons originally advanced for pay television made sense about a decade ago. The proponents promised recent movies, big sports events, ballet and drama, and other cultural fare.

■ Experiments were started. First there was one in Bartlesville, Okla. It died. Then came Etobicoke, Ontario, just outside Toronto. It struggled on for years, finally quit. The most publicized trial was in Los Angeles, and it was the most expensive. Before it finally was thrown out by a referendum, it was evident that pay-TV viewers weren't interested in culture. Nor were they particularly interested in anything but movies and the most important sports events. There is an experiment still going on in Hartford, Conn., relying chiefly on movies. The conclusion to be drawn from all these experiments is simply: Who needs it?

Educational television has grown rapidly, is available in most cities for those who want lectures, lessons, symphony music and other cultural TV.

■ No one needs a pay-television system for sports any more. There may be a couple of big events a year that aren't on free television, but we can't think of any offhand. And as for recent movies, ABC and CBS have just contracted for another $92.3 million worth of them. That just about clears the vaults of movies that haven't been offered to free television.

There may have been a reason for pay television once, but not now. It's all over.

Make the most of your military obligation.

Here's how:

Some men drift. Others plan. And the planners come out ahead. Especially young men of draft age who find out all about the different choices they have.

For instance, do you know the Army has three different training programs — Graduate Specialist . . . Vocational . . . and Combat Arms?

What does each offer you? Find out from the new booklet, The Secret of Getting Ahead. The coupon below will bring it to you. Then, after you've read it, ask your local Army Recruiter any questions you have.

Better yet, start planning immediately. See your Recruiter now. He'll give you the booklet and answer your questions on the spot. Of course, there's no obligation.

WHICH WAY IS TELEVISION GOING ?

THE MOST POWERFUL FORCES IN THE UNITED STATES
ARE NOW DEBATING BOLD CONCEPTS
THAT WILL DETERMINE THE MEDIUM'S FUTURE

First of two parts BY RICHARD K. DOAN

This country is moving closer than it ever has before toward creating nation-wide radio and television services comparable in scale and noncommercial character to Great Britain's semi-public BBC.

Decisions at the highest Washington levels in the next few months could either open the way for a firmly based, truly national, commercial-free companion to our present privately financed and operated broadcasting system, or consign nonprofit broadcasting in the United States to a continued tin-cup subsistence.

What has brought the question to a point of national decision is, of course, the spectacular proposal by the Ford Foundation, surprisingly seconded by the Communications Satellite Corporation.

The Ford group's president, McGeorge Bundy, has urged that the technological revolution be harnessed for the enlightenment of Americans through the establishment of a domestic satellite system created specifically for the benefit of educational radio and TV. The system as he envisioned it would be a nongovernmental, nonprofit one carrying all U.S. radio and television network programs, at a cost to commercial users less than they now pay for terrestrial transmission, but entirely cost-free to noncommercial media. Earnings would be contributed to the funding of noncommercial programming.

Comsat has offered to provide the hardware-in-the-sky, but proposed to make it an all-purpose system, not just for TV but for all potential satellite users, including the telephone and telegraph companies, data processors and others. A levy on all these users, Comsat claims, might raise twice as many millions of dollars for educational TV as Bundy foresaw.

Altogether the proposition has the earmarks of a panacea. It looks beguilingly painless to everybody. It is cloaked in nobility. It has offered hope to TV's disenchanting that the dreams they dreamed for the new medium two decades ago might finally come to fruition.

But for all the presumed blessings, there are forces against the idea. It will not materialize without a struggle.

Nobody, publicly at least, denied Bundy's contention that "noncommercial television has unlimited potential, for human welfare and the quality of American life. . . . Nothing is more needed—for television itself as well as for the country—than a first-rate national noncommercial service."

No one particularly questioned either that "it is all a question of money," as the perceptive Sen. John O. Pastore (D., R.I.), chairman of the influential Senate subcommittee on communications, put it.

It was the means Bundy proposed for achieving his panacea that aroused opposition. It ran afoul of vested interests. It raised time-honored questions of public vs. private enterprise, government "fund raising," carrier rights—all the ingredients of a first-rate Washington donnybrook.

A high and suspenseful drama began to unfold with these three pivotal figures:

Bundy—the former top-rank Presidential advisor who moved to the Ford Foundation last March, just five months before springing his bold blueprint. Ambitious, brilliant, domineering, he was staking his reputation on this project, many thought, and would not walk away from it.

Pastore—the shrewd, quick-witted, apparently powerful Capitol Hill friend of President Johnson, who lost no time summoning many other leading players in the drama to a public hearing in which he himself took the starring role. His theme: Congress will have the main say in this affair. And the public must win.

Lyndon B. Johnson—a President who has studiously avoided public involvement in broadcasting matters because his private fortunes stem chiefly from an Austin, Texas, TV station (now held in trust for his family). Most observers felt he would have to make his wishes felt, privately if not publicly, in any "national decision" on noncommercial television.

While this trio dominated the stage, the cast was not without many other star performers:

Fred W. Friendly—the former CBS News boss who became Bundy's TV consultant. A big man with heart, and a fire in the belly for informing the citizenry via television, he actually concocted the scheme for use of satellites for ETV.

Robert E. Kintner—the gravel-voiced, news-oriented former NBC president who became a White House advisor earlier this year. He had the President's ear and undoubtedly was influencing him in TV matters—which way, in this case, nobody seemed to know.

James C. Hagerty—former White House press secretary, now a top wheel in American Broadcasting Companies, who knows his way around Government and was a leading participant in ABC's unprecedented move last year seeking Federal Communications Commission permission to loft a private domestic satellite system. It was this pitch that prompted an FCC inquiry into its own jurisdiction in this field, and it was in response to an FCC invitation of "comments" that the Ford proposal was submitted.

Gen. James McCormack—dapper, chain-smoking chairman of Comsat, the quasi-public, quasi-private creation of Congress whose inside track on U.S. satellite business suddenly appeared jeopardized by Bundy's non-profit concept. His reversal of initial opposition to the Ford Plan and offer to make Comsat a party to it put a whole new complexion on the fight.

Dr. James R. Killian Jr.—chairman of the corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and suddenly hard-pressed chairman of a blue-ribbon Carnegie Commission on Educational Television. It was set up last year with President Johnson's endorsement to explore ways of bucking up ETV, including its financing. Bundy's bombshell burst right under this project, reportedly forcing it to drastically alter the course of its thinking.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.)—chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee and sponsor of the Educational Television Facilities Act of 1962, which earmarked $32,000,000 in grants for noncommercial stations. Magnuson said he would hold hearings early next year into "the entire educational television subject."

A cast of thousands

The unfolding drama also had a cast of thousands, among them the stockholders in TV networks, Comsat and other common carriers, whose fortunes could be affected by the final verdict. Comsat alone has 150,000 shareholders who, until last August, had reason to believe that when domestic Early Birds were ultimately positioned in 22,300-mile-high synchronous orbits, they would bear the Comsat label. Now they might and they might not.

Naturally the FCC is in the act, since it will eventually license whatever agency gets the satellite franchise, but the Commission's role does not appear decisive here. It will wait for its cues from both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Pastore has made it "perfectly clear" that his Senate group intends to "do nothing to impinge on the discretion and responsibility that rightfully belongs to the FCC" in satellite matters, but he has also left no doubt he feels Congress must explore "the entire breadth of legislative policy and regulatory activity" in this area. The FCC is hardly apt to act until Pastore and Magnuson give the nod.

It is not just a case of questions, raised by the FCC itself, as to its powers to license a satellite system for "private or specialized" needs, such as Bundy proposed—and Comsat challenged—but a need by FCC of directives from Congress or the President, or both, on what role, if any, Government is to take in funding ETV.

The three national commercial networks and the carrier corporations were cast in the somewhat uncomfortable roles of the heavies in the first act. For all their applause for the Ford Plan's high-mindedness, they had to confess they didn't like the implications or expected end results of the idea.

The networks—ABC, CBS and NBC—already enjoying record prosperity, obviously did not mind the idea of being able to hike per-share earnings still further as a result of savings of millions of dollars annually from a switchover from land lines to satellites. But it was clear also that they were not keen about being the chief customers of a service designed to turn a poor relative into a serious contender for audiences.

Friendly's ex-boss, Dr. Frank Stanton of CBS, was a reluctant witness before Pastore's hearing, evidently because he felt the networks were being rushed into a marriage they could live to regret. He said he felt the proposal called for "a great national discussion" and he thought Congress should weigh carefully whether the FCC should be put in a "fund-raising role" of licensing a system such as Bundy proposed. He doubted furthermore that Bundy's BNS (Broadcasters' Nonprofit Satellite Service) would raise anywhere near the $30,000,000 annually which its author calculated.

Stanton, according to gossip, was irked by what he saw as a Friendly-inspired ploy to make the commercial TV community the unwilling angel of the noncommercial medium. Last February Friendly had walked out on CBS in a bitter wrangle with his superiors over news policy.

He did indeed think up the basic satellite-for-ETV proposition, but it stemmed in great part from an obsession he acquired during his CBS News days over what he called "the tyranny of the long lines." He liked to relate that Gen. David Sarnoff once told him that if he, Sarnoff, "had it all to do over again, he'd have founded AT&T instead of RCA."

"I can testify that the full potential of television journalism is often sacrificed," Friendly told Pastore, "because the networks and stations are tied together by a lash-up of line-of-sight microwave stations that serve other needs besides broadcasting, that are often too slow to respond to the news emergency, and that are often too expensive to be practical."

Friendly was blue-skying

Friendly, the stories go, was blue-skying ideas for ETV with Bundy shortly after they joined forces, and he threw out a suggestion that Ford put up a satellite system of its own as a vehicle for a real "fourth network" designed to pipe instructional programming into classrooms as well as cultural and public-affairs programs to the country's 112 non-commercial stations.

"We might call it U.S. Vision," Friendly volunteered.

Bundy thought the idea worth looking into and put a team of lawyers, engineers and economists to researching it. When they brought in estimates that a "nonprofit" service set up to relay commercial network programs could generate millions of dollars for noncommercial TV, Bundy saw it as a proposition to run with.

The Foundation had sunk $100,000,000 into ETV, was still divvying up $10,000,000 a year, making this philanthropy its biggest ongoing commitment; and Bundy was looking for a respectable out, even if it meant kicking out one last big appropriation—say, $100 million!—to get BNS airborne.

He did not immediately go to the Ford Foundation board for the money, and now he may not need continued to. Apparently he underestimated Comsat's ability and willingness to play ball. At first General McCormack had looked like the loser in any victory for Bundy's scheme, because Comsat is profit-oriented in spite of its semi-governmental setup.

The Comsat offer to loft the hardware of a domestic system and contribute some of the tariff to noncommercial TV had interesting aspects:

It proposed to spread the "burden" of ETV among all satellite users, thus taking much of the wind out of commercial broadcasters' arguments that they alone were being asked by Bundy to be the chief support for the non-commercial channels.

Comsat additionally offered to give ETV the "cost-free highway"—satellite channels without charge—which Bundy envisioned.

McCormack's turnabout appeared to blunt the jabs of the common carriers, who publicly doubted that a nonprofit satellite system could be run as efficiently as one motivated by profit. They joined the networks in scoffing at Bundy's cost-and-revenue estimates, offered a bone to ETV in the form of rate breaks on any satellites the carriers might operate, and suggested that a better way to foot noncommercial TV's bills would be direct Government subsidy such as, say, a tax on TV advertisers' purchases of radio-TV time.

McCormack's offer, however, was possibly not in the clear as far as Comsat's shareholders were concerned. The biggest of them is one of the carriers, American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

Possibly as unsettling to the carriers and networks as Bundy's idea was one Pastore himself tossed in. He said he thought the possibilities of a "TVA in space" might be considered.

"There's a precedent for it," he noted, alluding of course to the Tennessee Valley Authority. "Space is a natural resource. And it belongs to the people. It's something to think about."

The nuts and bolts of the Bundy plan, to be sure, were only technical details. Satellite capability is already at hand. Domestic "birds" will be aloft in probably three to five years, barring some unforeseen delay.

The "eternal question," as Pastore kept saying, is: Who's to gain from it?

Shall it be just a new highway to the living room for Bewitched and Bonanza, with the highway tolls going to some carrier in business for a "fair return" on its investment? Or shall the opportunity be seized to set up "a whole new ball game," as Friendly phrased it, "... to rescue our blessings?"

A Haunting Portrayal

Sir Michael Redgrave turns spook for a musical ghost story

It looks like ABC is going to come up with a humorous version of quite a funny old play. "The Canterville Ghost," Oscar Wilde's comedy about a harried haunter, will take to song when it appears on the network's Stage 67. Britain's Sir Michael Redgrave (right), in an atypical singing role, will portray both the unhappy spook and his extant descendant. The story itself concerns the 350-year-dead ghost of Canterville Hall, who attempts—with little success—to scare an American family (headed by Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Natalie Schafer) out of the 13th-century English castle. They are not impressed.

Amid Elizabethan and Merseyside songs, Sir Simon calls upon his ghostly resources to combat American resistance. He haunts as himself (below) and as a host of other ectoplasmic creeps, including Silent Jack (left) and Jonas the Graveless (right); but all to no avail. The redoubtable Yanks prevail and the ghost gives up. "The haunting part is rather a lark . . . (but) . . . it's not a very exciting life, or death, or whatever it is," he grumbles.

Do Not Fold, Mutilate or Staple

Patricia Harty

of 'Occasional Wife'

is an actress

to fit the computerized age

"At 30 I want to be Audrey Hepburn," says Patricia Harty. "At 40 I want to be Geraldine Page." An actress to fit the computerized age, Pat Harty, at 24, has already programmed herself with conspicuous success through two Six-Year Plans and is now breezing confidently along with her own self-styled Master Plan. One facet of the latter includes her role of Greta in the NBC series Occasional Wife.

With the deep hollows and good cheekbones of a high-fashion model, Patricia Harty is a ripe blonde whose facial lines are more arresting than conventionally beautiful. She is briskly intelligent, with no-nonsense green eyes and a lithe, dancer's body. She is, once the shell of self-sufficiency is cracked, a likable and forthright young woman who forms—as she attracts—intense loyalties. She is, above all, a cool customer. Once, in the Philadelphia tryout of Noel Coward's musical "Sail Away," Patricia was adorned in a Bikini as she romped through a vigorous dance routine. As she whirled about, her bra strap snapped. "Excuse me," she murmured to the audience and, without missing a step, she danced into the wings, covered herself with a man's sport coat and unflinchingly went on with the dance. The audience roared its approval.

"I say, my dear," said Noel Coward, later, "that was rather marvelous. Let's keep it in the show."

"You aren't—I mean, you can't be serious?" Miss Harty cried. He decided that he wasn't.

Miss Harty is burningly—perhaps psychosomatically—ambitious. Once, while working as an extra in a TV commercial, she observed the pampering administered to the star. "Suddenly," she says, recalling that day, "I became ill and had to leave the studio. What caused it was just one thing—my envy over the way they catered to a star. I was acutely jealous. Envy tore right into my innards."

Miss Harty is self-confessedly a willing partner to guile. Once, in New York, Miss Harty found herself among 600 dancers waiting to audition for only three jobs. She phoned the show's dance director. "I can't make the audition," she explained, her voice atinkle with innocence. "But I'm an awfully good dancer. Could I see you later in the day when you're not so busy?" Miss Harty, who is indeed an awfully good dancer, got the job. "It's sneaky," she admits, "but it works. This business is so tough you might as well give yourself the best odds you can."

Patricia Lorraine Harty was born in Washington, D.C., moving later with her parents to North Miami, Fla. At 16, having completed her first Six-Year Plan of acquiring a high school diploma, skills in acting, singing and dancing and a thousand dollars in the bank, she set out for New York. She dwelled first at that haven for the out-of-town girl, Manhattan's Barbizon Hotel for Women. "Hated it," Patricia says now. "I don't get along very well with women, anyway. Most women are complainers."

With typical self-assurance, she made her first move—backstage at the Ziegfeld Theater she demanded to see Louis Da Pron, choreographer of The Perry Como Show, on urgent business. As a matter of fact, the startled Da Pron informed her, a girl dancer had just quit and they were about to issue a call for a replacement. "Would you like to audition?" Da Pron said. "Why, yes," Patricia said, "that would be all right." She got that job, too, later moving on to the old Andy Williams summer show, then to the Pat Boone show. At this point, she met E. Thomas Kearney Jr., a onetime radio announcer who subsequently became her manager and, five years later, her husband.

Tom Kearney, a brash and sometimes abrasive New Yorker from a moneyed family background, is not commonly known as a princely fellow. "People don't like me at first—they say I've got a conceited face," says Kearney, a fast-talking Brown University graduate who also did a post-graduate turn at Oxford. "But I've learned about show business and I think I know what's best for Pat." Not yet 17, with Kearney at the controls, Patricia devised her second Six-Year Plan, with its ultimate goal a featured part in a Broadway show.

She took her dancing shoes to The Garry Moore Show. At Kearney's insistence she departed this job and its $275-a-week pay check for $95 a week dancing and understudying the ingénue in the musical "Fiorello!" Eight months later she was playing the role. In the fall of 1960 Noel Coward spotted her in "Fiorello!" and signed her for his "Sail Away." In 1963, she briefly replaced Barbara Harris in the off-Broadway "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sad." In addition she worked in commercials and then in two daytime TV shows, The Doctors and Search for Tomorrow. When producer Harry Ackerman saw her in the movie "Harvey Middleman, Fireman," he offered her the top role in Occasional Wife, a series planned for Screen Gems.

"This is a girl," says Ackerman, "with that unusual blend of innocence and maturity. She has that sweet-sexy quality that's made for television." Patricia draws a similar portrait of her assets. "The thing about me," she says, "is that my face doesn't go with my body. I'm the kind of girl who can wear a brief Bikini and somebody's maiden aunt will say, 'My, isn't she a nice girl!'"

She sips her vegetable juice and puffs animatedly on a cigaret—she puts away a pack a day—and discusses the current Master Plan to which she and Kearney are

MOST RELIABLE TREATMENT TO

Reduce Swelling of Inflamed Joints As It Relieves Arthritis Pain

Gives continuous relief for hours from minor pain and stiffness. Now twice as strong as the other extra-strength tablet in the compound doctors prescribe most.

There's real help in store for arthritis sufferers. Medical research has definitely established that the most reliable medication in the treatment of arthritis—the one most likely to successfully control the pain and inflammation over a long period of time—is the compound in today's Anacin® Tablets.

Anacin's great pain-fighter is the first choice of doctors. They prescribe it the most. And Anacin is now twice as strong in this compound as the other extra-strength tablet. That's why Anacin gives you extra relief power from arthritis pain, its stiffness and inflammation.

In minutes, you can feel minor pain and its stiffness leave your joints so you can move more easily again. And this relief continues for hours. Only Anacin has this fortified combination of ingredients with a specific agent that helps reduce inflammation and swelling as it relieves painful stiffness.

rigorously dedicated. "The goal is to become well-known, to become a national name," she says, "and then it's good pictures and good roles on Broadway."

"Whatever happens with Occasional Wife, if it's the biggest hit since I Love Lucy or the bomb of the ages, this is our first and last series for Pat," says Kearney.

"Well, maybe—" says Patricia.

"No, I mean it," Kearney insists. "Television is fine, but it's only on Broadway that a performer becomes a Mary Martin or a Merman."

Patricia nods. "One series and that's it," she agrees. "On TV and in Hollywood youth is served. But on Broadway the older you get the more you're recognized. Helen Hayes, Ethel Merman, Gerry Page, Kim Stanley—none of them are kids. Men can last forever in films but for women the stage is the fountain of youth."

As part of the Master Plan, Kearney has established certain inflexible rules, as follows—no Playboy layouts, no beach-party movies, no deodorant or undergarment commercials, no prostitute roles unless their source is a literary classic. "In college I used to sell coffee for extra money," Kearney says. "Man, I SOLD coffee! Now I'm selling Patricia Harty and I want to keep my product absolutely right."

Today the Kearneys live in a stylish Hollywood apartment, complete with pool and sauna, but both consider as home their farm in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, a 600-acre spread where they raise beef cattle, fish, ski and don't answer the telephone. Whether she is on the farm or in Hollywood, Miss Harty dutifully bakes a half-dozen loaves of bread each week. However, she sings no odes to domesticity. "Kneading the dough," says the ever-practical Patricia, "is the best exercise I know for the bust line."

NBC Ponders Nighttime Culture

NBC at the outset of this no-hits TV season found itself unexpectedly on top the network ratings heap. Frequent mention was being made in trade stories, however, of the fact that NBC was unburdened by any regularly scheduled do-good effort in prime time such as CBS's News Hour and ABC's Stage 67, which tend by nature to pull down those networks' competitive ratings standings.

NBC president Julian Goodman reputedly is conscious of this and hoping to take a remedial step: the setting aside of a prime evening hour 52 weeks a year, beginning next fall, for news, public affairs and cultural programming. This would reverse a long-standing NBC policy of booking such specials on a pre-emptive basis at various hours. NBC this season, incidentally, has cut back on such programming and may run less than a dozen hour specials of this genre in prime time. It's a decided cutback from several years ago when more than 40 were aired.

ABC may in effect be showing two movies every Wednesday evening beginning in January. As part of a massive "second season" overhaul, the network was reported thinking of following Batman I with Off to See the Wizard and a two-hour movie. Wizard is a Disney-type concoction of Oz animations and new and old film features being assembled for ABC by MGM. Viewers watching Wizard may find themselves a little unsure what channel they're on. Among old box-office attractions in prospect: "Flipper," "Tarzan, the Ape Man" and "Clarence, the Cross-eyed Lion" (genesis of Daktari). Wizard and a new science-fiction adventure, The Invaders, starring Roy Thinnes, will be among the shows moved in to replace such casualties as Hawk and Shane.

Chevrolet reportedly dangled $3.5 million before the James Bond movie producers for TV rights to "Goldfinger" and "Dr. No" in an attempt to get back at Ford for knocking Bonanza off its top ratings perch with the ABC showing of "The Bridge on the River Kwai." "We can't comment on it," said an official at Chevy's Detroit ad agency, Campbell-Ewald. But he conceded the automaker was "exploring new concepts in programming, among them movies."

The annual Christmas show at New York's Radio City Music Hall, which has been called the biggest indoor tourist attraction on earth, will be filmed by NBC during the coming holidays for showing in December 1967—and hopefully every Christmas thereafter as an annual classic. It represents a TV breakthrough: the first time a Music Hall stage show has been pictured in its habitat. NBC's Easter show with Mary Martin was taped at the network's Brooklyn studios.

Briefly: CBS News boss Richard Salant made an unpublicized visit to Saigon this month. His back-home conclusion: "If the public will tolerate it, we've got to tell more [about the Vietnam war] in words and less in pictures" . . . —Richard K. Doan

TWO SIDES

Re "Down with Football!" by Robert Musel [TV GUIDE, Oct. 15]. I firmly believe the next article you receive from Mr. Musel will be his recommendations for improving motherhood and the flag. If Mr. Musel is so enamored by Britain and its rugby, tell him to stay there. I'm sure we can ably get along without him in this country.

Dick Stark
Columbus, Ohio

Bravo to Robert Musel for his perceptive attack on that All-American weekend TV tedium, football! As a former student of Ohio State University, I was always entertained by the frenzy and spectacle introduced by the fans, but watching the football game itself is like viewing a movie whose projection equipment is constantly breaking down and interrupting the show.

Willis Rokes
Omaha

VICTORS?

If "The Victors" [The CBS Thursday Night Movies, Oct. 13] had been a living being instead of a movie, it would have bled to death from stab wounds of the film editor's scissors. Rumor has it that "Cleopatra" was obtained for showing in the future. I wonder if they can jam it into a 30-second commercial time slot?

Robert J. Denton
Concord, Cal.

When released in its original form for theaters, "The Victors" presented a strong argument against war. When released in its edited form for the CBS movie, it presented an equally strong case against television.

Alan Sturm
Frederick, Md.

CAROL: CON AND PRO

"Carol & Company" was so unbelievably bad I was so fascinated I couldn't turn it off. Was this show deliberately unprofessional and humorless as a stunt to discover what the public could be made to endure? Are these artists so completely lacking in concern for their reputations and their futures? I should like to nominate this insulting program for awards as the worst possible in every category available.

David Stewart
Agincourt, Ont.

Well! I had just about given up on television but what a sweet and refreshing breath of entertainment "Carol & Company" was. Everything was smooth, perfectly timed, with nary a dull moment. A more well-written, directed and produced show there never was. The cast was superbly blended—something for everyone. I say bravo for Carol, Rock Hudson, Frank Gorshin, and Ken Berry, and encore!

'The Vanishing Newspaper'

This program, the conclusion of a two-part report on the American press, examines the Nation's small-town dailies.

Writer-producer John O'Toole looks at small dailies in the South, Southwest and New England to show contrasting philosophies of journalism. Some papers, apparently designed as little more than advertising media, concentrate almost exclusively on local news—"bulletin-board journalism." Editorials are rare, world news almost ignored. Others have strong editorial voices, carry world as well as local news, and still make profits.

In interviews, editors, publishers and reporters discuss their papers, problems and the people they serve.

Henry Butler narrates. (60 min.)

9:00 3 4 7 8 ICE SHOW—Variety

SPECIAL COLOR Don Adams of "Get Smart" takes to the ice for this 30th annual presentation of the Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies.

Featured performers in this anniversary show include the Beattys, precision skaters from England; Richard Dwyer and Dorothyann Nelson; three-time German champion Ina Bauer (who skates to the theme from "Walk on the Wild Side"); figure-skating champ Don Jackson ("Peter Gunn" and "Goldfinger"); and the Williams Family ("Oklahoma!").

Comedy is provided by Mr. Frick, who performs a back-bend while whizzing over the ice; Senor Hee Haw, a skating burro; and the clowning Scarecrows.

Production numbers re-create an 1890's skating party in Central Park; a Japanese version of "The Night Before Christmas"; a policemen and firemen's ball; and a fashion show.

Das Ist Eine Goof-up Slide

Vexed when, in the middle of some dastardly scheming on Peyton Place, the picture is lost or the sound just stops? And they stick a sign up that says, "Herbie got his thumb in the fuse box again, so you'll just have to wait." Of course it's annoying, un-American even!

And it is just as un-American as it is very commonly American. Other people have their troubles too, you know. So when the video voice dies down in foreign climes, stations there, too, must trot out their pause cards and hope the good burghers remain stolid.

In many cases the foreign slides show more wit than the stodgy U.S. styles. Often they don't simply say, "Sorry, but we'll be back soon." They're original, amusing, sympathetic. They even sometimes (heaven forbid!) make fun of themselves.

And so here, on these very pages before you—for your edification and enjoyment—are some examples of foreign temporary-interruption art; from Switzerland, Germany, Sweden, Austria, England, France, Ja . . .

(We regret to announce that there will be a temporary delay. Please stand by.)

Sweden: 'A technical failure' is all they'll tell the apprehensive audience.

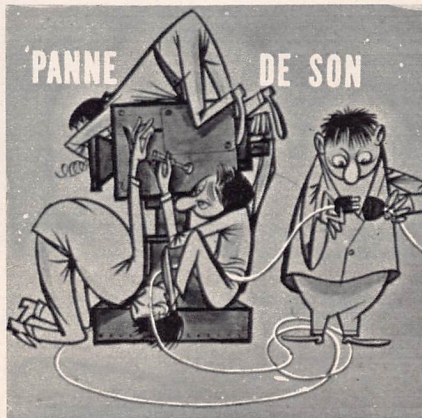

Poland: The word means 'deficiency or flaw.' And the backward 'E' proves it.

England: Howe could onne saye the BBC is eveyn the wee-est bitte stuffie?

France: 'Loss of sound' is what it says. And correction may be pretty simple.

Austria: The caption refers to a minor problem. An understatement perhaps?

BANKER WITH A STING

The man in the green mask is none other than Van Williams, your friendly neighborhood tycoon

BY LESLIE RADDATZ

In the eight years of his television career, actor Van Williams has gone from Bourbon Street Beat to The Green Hornet. In the area of making progress, this is roughly equivalent to an astronaut's crossing the street. Or perhaps it isn't even that, because, as The Green Hornet, Williams sports a mask, thus harking back to the very beginnings of the theater, when actors wore masks to identify the characters they played and to show their changes of mood.

Not that the mask makes much difference in Williams' acting. Whether in his "real" identity as newspaper publisher Britt Reid or as the masked Hornet, his technique is primarily limited to an occasional tensing of the jaw or narrowing of the eyes in moments of stress. Williams has no pretensions about his acting. "The Green Hornet is a pretty dead-pan guy," he says, and that's the way he plays him, since the decision was to eschew the campy goings on of Batman and play The Hornet straight. "Lots of action—that's what makes a show," says Van, who has already objected to two Green Hornet scripts because they contained too much dialog.

Whatever his lack of pretension about his acting abilities or the limited artistic—as opposed to physical—demands of the role, Williams seems to be exactly what the men behind The Green Hornet were looking for among the dozens of available actors they considered for the part. George Trendle, the octogenarian who created The Hornet as a radio show back in the 1930's, for instance, says, "All of a sudden you see someone who fills the bill perfectly, and Van Williams was it."

Williams is a college graduate, a former football player and professional scuba diver and, off-screen, a successful businessman who says, "I've still got the first dollar I ever earned." His principal interest in acting—aside from the pay, which is good—seems to be the sheer fun of it, with none of the tortured self-seeking or the need for love or escape from a deprived childhood which traditionally mark so many of his contemporaries.

There were doubters, though, when Williams said that he had spent two days of soul-searching before accepting the role of The Green Hornet. After all, many of the alumni of the old Warner Bros. television shows—the handsome faces but limited talents of Bourbon Street Beat, Hawaiian Eye, SurfSide 6, 77 Sunset Strip and the rest—have found it difficult to get acting jobs since. From Bourbon Street Beat, Van Williams went into SurfSide 6. After that, except for a minor movie role, two unsold pilot films and some TV roles, he did not work steadily again until he landed a secondary role ("I was just an errand boy for Walter Brennan") in the short-lived Tycoon series.

Thus, at the press luncheon (featuring green martinis) announcing his choice to play The Green Hornet, there was some cynicism when he said it had taken him two days to make up his mind. "I'll bet it took him all of 10 seconds," said one reporter. Another asked suspiciously, "Haven't you been doing public relations for a bank?" To which Williams replied with all the aplomb of The Green Hornet—or perhaps of newspaper publisher Britt Reid: "That's right—I own it."

He does indeed own a bank in Los Angeles, with his business manager, and actor James Garner; and, with his parents, he also owns a ranch, a shopping center and a downtown building in Fort Worth, Texas. "But I don't have to do anything with any of them," he says—especially things like chase crooks and get into fights and careen around corners in a big black car and wear a green mask. Richard Bluel, producer of The Green Hornet, who has known Van since Bourbon Street Beat days, says, "He is secure, personally and financially. He does this because he really enjoys it."

Originally Van planned to be a rancher, like his father. He was born VanZandt Jarvis Williams on a ranch near Fort Worth on Feb. 27, 1934. Although he has no pretensions about his acting, he is proud of his Texas forebears: "The VanZandts and the Jarvises were there when Fort Worth was really a fort," he says. His parents still live on a ranch near Fort Worth, but according to his father, "We've sold off all but 12 or 13 hundred acres of it." Of Van, the elder Williams says, "We never thought he'd do anything but ranch. He's about as good a cattleman as I know."

Van would probably be ranching now if it were not for a chain of circumstances which began with his marrying a coed during his freshman year at Texas Christian, where he went on a football scholarship. By the time he was a junior, he was the father of twin girls, was divorced and had decided to drop out of school. Disturbed by the failure of his marriage, he went to the South Pacific and scuba diving. He eventually ended up in Honolulu, working in a theater. There he met the continued late Mike Todd, who got him interested in acting and persuaded him to finish college. After receiving his degree in business administration in 1958, Van headed for Hollywood. A role in a G.E. Theater caught the attention of Warner Bros., who put him in Bourbon Street Beat. "He was pretty green and fresh from Texas, but he always had real charm," says someone who knew him then.

An impressive kick

Once, his charm ran out. On Surf-Side 6, one actress was habitually late and often did not know her lines when she got there. Williams, on the other hand, was—and is—punctual and ready to go to work. After some weeks, an observer recalls, "Van just blew up. One day when she came in late, he gave her a kick in the derrière—not a hard kick but an impressive one—and said, 'If I can be here on time, you can, too.' She went screaming all the way up to Jack Warner's office. Nobody would believe it really happened, because Van was always so easy to get along with."

Today Williams, his wife Vicki, "the very athletic girl" he married on New Year's Eve 1959, and two daughters (Nina, 9, and Tia, 4), live at the foot of a canyon in Pacific Palisades. "It's like living out in the country," he says. "I never have been able to get used to city life." The Williamses spend "90 percent of the time" outdoors—surfing, swimming, playing tennis and skiing. "We're day people," says Mrs. Williams. In the summer, the 12-year-old twins, accompanied by Van's parents, come out to visit. The parents continue on to Northern California to see their older son, a Trappist monk. Of the twins, Van says, "They're growing up—blossoming out, getting all their femininities."

When he says something like this, his Texas accent is there in all its Johnsonian glory. It is not heard in The Green Hornet—the producers of the program put Van through a course with the studio's drama coach to get rid of it. But when the off-screen voice of the President of the United States was needed for the "Batman" feature movie, Van was chosen for the role and told to be just as Texan as possible.

Despite his background, and having "rodeoed some," Williams has never been identified with Westerns. "I guess Warner Brothers pictured me as a guy in a suit and tie," he says. In The Green Hornet he still wears a suit and tie, plus a topcoat, scarf, snap-brim hat and heavy gloves, which, with the tight-fitting mask, can get pretty warm on a 90-degree Southern California day. During the shooting of one show he lost 17 pounds.

Confessed tightwad

On the TV screen, Williams is chauffeured about by his faithful man Kato, played by Bruce Lee, in a rocket-equipped car called "Black Beauty." Off-screen, he drives a 1959 Pontiac stationwagon, and only after signing to do The Green Hornet did he "break down" and buy a new Chevrolet. Except for the payments on the modest house in Pacific Palisades, he pays cash for everything. "I'm a tightwad," he admits. Of his acting career, he says, "I'd like to be a success, but I'd never count on it—it's too harum-scarum." And Van-Zandt Jarvis Williams would never permit himself to become deeply involved with anything harum-scarum. For, although he may be seen any Friday night running around in a silly green mask, he is, above all, a practical man with a bank, a ranch, a shopping center, some downtown real estate in Fort Worth and a 1959 Pontiac to prove it. But he is also, at 32, still kid enough to enjoy running around in that silly mask.

The Time Tunnel

This show offered at least a new idea—that of taking us back, via the conquering of time, to the Good Old Days. You remember those carefree happy times—Dunkirk, Appomattox, Valley Forge . . . Anyway, the first scene of the very first episode was terrific. A senator (Gary Merrill)—golly, you don't suppose they've elected him too—arrives on a lonely desert and is promptly swallowed up and brought underground to where a general (Whit Bissell) and a couple of doctors (John Zaremba and Lee Meriwether) and 12,000 other people are spending 7½ billion dollars of network—I mean U.S.—money trying to send a man to Outer Time.

To prove the worth of the project, before they even know how to bring a man back from their time tunnel, scientist Tony Newman (James Darren), who's as game as they come, runs into the mouth of the thing and dives in. Well, sir, he lands in 1912, which is annoying enough but, worse luck, it's the 11th of April, and he's on the deck of the Titanic. A lesser man might have called it quits right there, but not Tony. He goes right to the captain to warn him. But the captain—you know the type—won't believe it until he sees it in the paper, and he locks Tony up.

Meanwhile, back at the mouth of the tunnel, Bissell and Lee Meriwether send down Tony's partner in time, Doug Phillips (Robert Colbert), with a copy of the New York Sentinel of April 15, 1912, to help him. But it's no dice. The ship crashes anyway. Tony's toughest job is to persuade his 1912 girl friend (Susan Hampshire) to get into a lifeboat. "I've no right to a place in one of those boats," she says. "I'm not a rich girl on holiday, I'm a penniless schoolteacher. And besides, I've got a growth inside my head." There's darn little even a guy like Tony can answer to that, but we tell you that boy doesn't know the meaning of the word quit.

In another show the lads land in Honolulu in the Japanese consulate on—you guessed it—the night before Pearl Harbor. The Japanese are, of course, furious. "Reave the consurate!" shouts their reader—I mean their leader. And even after Tony and Doug are innoculated with tluth selum, the Japanese still refuse to believe that Japan, in the end, rost the war.

All in all, The Time Tunnel is one of the most annoying shows we've seen. There is imagination and inventiveness in the photography and gimmickry, but the acting is stilted and unbelievable, the dialog is soap-operish. And finally, it's preposterous to have bombs and things like that repeatedly coming up the tunnel. When Halley's Comet came up, Dr. Swain (John Zaremba) said quietly, "I think the time has come to rethink this whole project." We couldn't have agreed more.

WHEN FREE SPEECH IS MIGHTY EXPENSIVE

It can cost a pro football coach $1000

BY MELVIN DURSLAG

At the last inspection by the vice president in charge of due notes, the National Football League had $18,800,000 coming in television fees this year from its regularly scheduled games. Another $2,000,000 was on its way from the championship game; and then there were odds and ends to be picked up from the Play-off Bowl, the Pro Bowl and an extravaganza of interplanetary dimensions, the title game between the champions of the National and American Leagues.

At the ticket office, more than half the clubs in the NFL started the season virtually sold out.

Obviously, the National League isn't suffering, giving its coaches the feeling that it could survive handily without the $1000 it takes from its field leaders each time they disagree publicly with an official.

Indeed, $1000, known also as a Big One, is the standard assessment for a coach who indulges this pastime, one which may annoy the commissioner but has considerable therapeutic value for the guy doing the knocking.

You tell baseball managers they are not able to contest decisions and they will soon be leaving the grounds in strait jackets. In basketball, the coaches not only beef, but they stir the crowds to a point where officials must leave afterward in protective custody of police.

And, of course, the boxing manager who doesn't scream that his boy was robbed isn't trying.

But professional football is a gentleman's game, calling for Etonian comportment. It is quite permissible for a player to give a guy a clothesline, which is a stiff forearm across the throat, or to nail him with a humper—a shoulder to the face. But a coach who intimates that an official blew a call is a blackguard bringing shame to the sport.

It is estimated by the National Nielsen Television Index that 8,230,000 homes were tuned, on the average, to the weekly NFL games last year. Devices called the instant replay and the stop-action camera were bringing to viewers the real story only seconds after it happened. Yet, if a coach a week later were to comment on a call clear to millions, he would be fined.

At least four coaches in the National League got into trouble over officiating last year. First, Mike Nixon at Pittsburgh lashed out angrily at what he felt were incompetent calls. The plate was passed and Mike contributed a Big One.

Then Harland Svare of Los Angeles approached the matter in a different way. With cool restraint, he announced that he didn't question the competence or the integrity of the officials. But in their subconscious they were, in his estimation, responding to the wishes of the home-town crowds. He was hinting, in other words, that due to a mental condition over which they had no control, they were giving the Rams a bum shake on the road.

This scholarly deduction got Svare nothing better than a fine of a Big One, but it did result in measures of self-correction on the part of NFL officials, who went into Chicago the following Sunday, conquered their subconscious—and called a couple of raw ones against George Halas, the distinguished proprietor of the Bears.

George was more hurt than angry, He sought out the supervisor of league officials, who watched the game, and in the presence of newsmen said to him, tearfully, "I'm glad you were here to see this in person."

George explained that what was just witnessed could have been the worst crime to hit Chicago since Leopold and Loeb.

On the heels of a 27-3 loss to Los Angeles, a cellar team, Wally Lemm of St. Louis described officiating in the league as "inconsistent," pointing out that he had made this complaint repeatedly to the commissioner but had been ignored.

"If a player or a coach isn't good," said Lemm, "he doesn't stick. The two groups are turned over frequently. But officials stay."

Lemm's observation about turnovers was more prophetic than he had thought. A short time later, the Cardinals fired him. Svare and Nixon were tossed out too, and the same could have happened to Halas if he weren't the owner. It is unreasonable to believe, however, that the insurrection against league authority was related to the other three losing their jobs.

It remains unaccountable why football should be more tender on the subject of free speech than other sports. It cost Leo Durocher only $250 (and a brief suspension) to kick umpire Jocko Conlan in the shins. If Leo had been content merely to talk, which is his long suit, he could have reduced his fine at least $200.

Repeatedly, baseball managers deliver orations on the ineptness of umps at no charge whatsoever.

The spitball, for instance, has not escaped public discussion by managers. After Don Drysdale pitched against the Braves one day, Bobby Bragan revealed that he had taken a poll of his players, who had been asked to count the spitters. Bragan announced that his boys reported a total of 33, exclusive of what Bobby had seen himself.

Such a disclosure, of course, tended to paint the umpires as dolts, but it didn't cost Bragan a quarter.

An NFL coach, spectacularly unhappy with the $1000 fine that faces critics of officiating, dramatizes the inequity of it all by pointing to professional golf.

"Doug Sanders was leading in a tournament this year and forgot to sign his score card, thereby disqualifying himself," the coach says. "He felt the officials distracted him. The language he used isn't what you hear in Sunday school. And do you know how much he was fined? A hundred bucks.

"But, apart from the price, it isn't healthy for a man to be silenced when he has something on his mind."

It would seem especially the case when what he has on his mind is seen by millions of others.

Betty James assembles tuners for Emerson TV sets.

If she makes more than 4 mistakes a month, we won't buy her lunch.

But every week for the past six months, we have bought her lunch. And given her a TV set too.

It's part of our employee Top Quality program. It rewards the people who do their jobs a little better than they have to.

When mistakes are made—and they will be made—we find them. Our inspectors (31 of them) find them. And inspectors (6) who inspect the inspectors find them. And 15 electronic technicians find them.

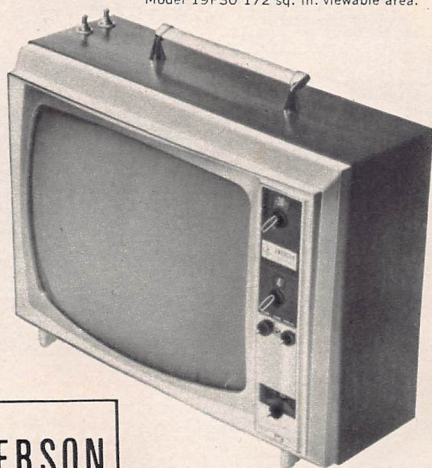

When we correct them. If we didn't, the Perm-Lok control on this 17-inch portable* we're advertising is hot work. And you wouldn't be able to permanently fine-tune VHF channels.

Employees who don't be very unhappy. If a few more mistakes that are made, the chance there'll be that you'll be unhappy. So we buy Betty James, and people like her, lunch every now and then.

When you see how happy you are with a new Emerson, maybe you'd like to do the same.
